HOUSE CLEANING IN GETTYSBURG

Just a Few Requests for the People of Town to Observe when Preparing for the Town's House Cleaning on Wednesday.

Gettysburg people who expect to help in the first municipal house cleaning on Wednesday, May first, are requested to observe a few regulations in order that the work may be done as quickly and as thoroughly as possible.

The town council has authorized Street Commissioner Newman to procure as many teams as necessary to haul away the rubbish and it is expected that many will be required. In some towns an entire week is taken to the work so that to clean up Gettysburg in one day will mean an early start and an extra effort. In order to get the work well on its way early in the morning house-holders are requested to set out in alleys or on pavements the material they wish to have taken away. Rubbish from gardens and back yards may be placed in the alleys while front yard debris may be placed on the pavements. Everything should be put in receptacles or on piles so that the wagons may be loaded rapidly. The matter of putting out material is to be done on Monday or Tuesday so that the highway force will not have to wait for people to clean up their own premises.

Several of the citizens of town have little surprises planned for the day in the way of improvements about their properties. One or two merchants will make much needed changes about their places of business while residences are to be given special attention.

All the neighboring towns have got the house cleaning idea and in Maryland seventy eight towns were given an order to clean up. It is hoped that all will enter into the matter heartily and make Gettysburg's first municipal house cleaning day a big success.

PROPOSED TROLLEY LINE TO EAST BERLIN

A representative committee of East Berlin citizens conferred with prominent merchants of York Friday afternoon in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce relative to the proposed building of a trolley line to East Berlin. Nothing definite has been done, but if plans are carried out, the new road will branch from the tracks of the York Railways company at the Weiglestown station, and pass through Weiglestown, Baumhansville and then to the park at East Berlin. In all about ten miles of track would have to be built. More definite action will be taken at a meeting to be held next Tuesday night at East Berlin. The committee which visited York Friday was composed of the following: Isaac Miller, George L. Baubitz, William Leas, Peter Smith, Fred Altland, George Jacobs, Joseph Naylor and Frank Lauer.

PRETTY NEAR THE LIMIT

Two Waynesboro men pretended they were drunk, were arrested and sent to the Franklin County jail for thirty days when they refused to pay their fine. The whole thing was a scheme to witness the execution of William Reed next week but when Sheriff Walker of Franklin county told them no prisoners would be allowed to see the hanging they quickly secured funds to meet their fine and secured their release.

HAGERMAN-GALLAGHER

Frank Hagerman, son of Mrs. Emma J. Hagerman, of McSherrystown, and Miss Gertrude Gallagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gallagher, of Edgemoor, were married in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Hanover, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, by Rev. A. Brandt.

The groom is a cigarmaker, employed in McSherrystown, and the bride has been making her home with her brother, Charles Gallagher.

TAKEN TO PENITENTIARY

Archie Clay and Ollie Carter were taken to the Eastern Penitentiary Friday by Sheriff Thompson, Max Williams and Noah Beamer.

There will be preaching service at Fairfield Reformed church next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock; in McKnightstown Reformed church at 2 o'clock and in Castown Reformed church at 7:30 p. m. Rev. S. S. Senneng will deliver the sermons at all three churches. Members are requested to attend.

SEES HUSBAND AFTER 3 YEARS

Edgar Starnor who Left his Wife without Warning Three Years ago suddenly Puts in his Appearance again.

After a three years' absence in "parts unknown" Edgar Starnor returned to East Berlin this week only to fail to recognize his wife who knew nothing of his whereabouts since his unceremonious departure.

About four years ago Edgar Starnor, of near Hampton, and Miss Hortensia Day, of East Berlin, were married and some time thereafter moved to York.

While residing there Mrs. Starnor and child paid a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Day, at East Berlin. When she again returned to York the husband had disposed of the household goods and departed for parts unknown, since which time, about three years ago, the wife, it is said, knew nothing of his whereabouts. Mrs. Starnor returned to the home of her parents, where she has since resided.

One day this week Starnor again made his appearance in East Berlin, but meeting his wife on the street, unexpectedly, failed to recognize her. Where Starnor has been putting in his time during his long absence is not known.

He has left East Berlin, it is said, and residents of that place again are at a loss concerning his whereabouts.

WILLIAM H. ASHBAUGH

On Wednesday William H. Ashbaugh, for years a respected and honored citizen of Emmitsburg, died at his home at the age of seventy five years.

Mr. Ashbaugh was the son of John H. Ashbaugh, a native of Gettysburg, and Mrs. Martha Hann Ashbaugh, born in Carroll county. William Ashbaugh was a native of Carroll county and a resident of Emmitsburg since 1866. He served for thirty five years as deputy sheriff and county constable, a record of public service in such capacity unequalled in Maryland. He refused reappointment under the newly elected sheriff on account of his rapidly failing health.

In 1876 Mr. Ashbaugh was made Emmitsburg town constable, which office he held, in connection with his other duties, for nineteen years when his health made it imperative for him to give up the town office. Ten days after his selection as town constable he was appointed county constable and in December of 1876 he was made deputy sheriff, serving the three offices for fifteen years. It will be recalled that it was Mr. Ashbaugh who placed William Eyer under arrest as he approached Emmitsburg on his flight after the murder of Howard Miller on Memorial Day several years ago.

Funeral in Emmitsburg today.

MOVING STATION AT PORTERS

Extensive improvements are being made at Porters by the Western Maryland Railroad Company, work having commenced this week. A gang of carpenters are now preparing to move the large station from its present location to a site located some distance back in the "Y" nearer to the end of the old main track. A unique way of doing this has been planned by the Western Maryland architects. The building will be raised from its foundation and then slipped over on the main track of the company, where it will be attached to an engine by the aid of chains and then be pulled to its new location.

TO HOLD COUNTY C. E. CONVENTION

Many Good Speakers for Annual Convention at Littlestown. Matters of Interest to be Discussed. Music a Feature.

The annual convention of the Adams County Christian Endeavor Union will be held in St. Paul's Lutheran church, Littlestown Thursday and Friday May 2nd and 3rd. The first session will begin at 2:15 Thursday afternoon and the last session will be Friday evening.

A splendid program has been arranged. The United Singers of Littlestown will sing at both evening sessions. Dr. Clarence Chain, the State Christian Endeavor Secretary, and many other speakers will be present among them being Rev. W. A. Korn, Rev. S. R. Ludwig, Rev. L. L. Taylor, Rev. J. B. Baker, Rev. P. T. Stockslager, and Rev. C. F. Floto.

A special feature will be the music, which will be under the leadership of L. L. Taylor, of Gettysburg. He will have charge of a large chorus of Littlestown people.

There will be a sunrise session at six o'clock Friday morning led by Guy McCarnay of Gettysburg. Many interesting features will add to the convention and matters of much importance to all Christian Endeavorers will be discussed.

CATCHES NO MORE RATTLERS

William Whitmer, known throughout South Mountain as "Rattlesnake Bill," has given up catching snakes and has purchased a farm in Pennsylvania, where he will make his home.

For many years he has captured and shipped all over the country hundreds of rattlers, and is said to have been bitten more than 100 times. He carries an antidote of his own manufacture which counteracts the poison of rattlers, and he pays no more attention to the strike of one than is ordinarily paid to a scratch. Some time ago he discovered a den of rattlers in a rock break near Pen Mar, and in bagging a number was bitten nine times.

He keeps his snakes in the cellar of his home, but has about a dozen rattler pets that crawl from room to room and are fondled by his children. He claims to have caught 1,000 snakes in his time but says he is now out of that business.

ELECTRIC PLANT A LOSER

According to a statement in the Emmitsburg Chronicle, the electric light plant of Thurmont, instead of returning a profit of about $400, a year, actually shows a loss of $300.00, without counting anything for depreciation of plant, or sinking fund for the retirement of its cost. Interest on cost of plant is given as $1025.00, operating expense $640.50, cost of lighting two hall and streets $700.00, total $2365.50. Total receipts, sale of light and power $2065.34. As we understand it, this is a water power plant, and was argued to be sure paying investment for the town.

GIRL OF MY DREAMS

The chart and tickets for "The Girl of My Dreams" will be at the Hotel Gettysburg, from Monday, April 29th at 11 a. m. until Tuesday, April 30th at 12 noon, in charge of W. A. Hollebaugh manager of the New Colonial Theatre, Hanover, where the above attraction plays on Saturday May 4th. This will be the season's greatest theatrical event as it is the highest class musical comedy and opera on the road this season, traveling in a special train of four cars with 80 people in the cast. The special cars go through Gettysburg on the 8:42 train Saturday morning May 4th. Watch for them.

RICHESON'S LAST HOPE

Commutation to Life Term Asked of Governor's Council.
Boston, April 27.—A final step by counsel for Clarence V. T. Richeson, murderer of Miss Avila Linnell, to secure a commutation of his death sentence was taken before Governor Foss. They urged the governor to lay their petition, asking that sentence of death be changed to one of life imprisonment, before the executive council.
Richeson's execution is set for the week beginning May 19.

JERUSALEM MOURNS FOR ISIDOR STRAUSS

Merchant's Wife Included in Their Lamenting.

London, April 27.—Sixty thousand Jews in Jerusalem are fasting and mourning for Isidor Straus and Mrs. Straus, who went down with the ill-fated liner Titanic.

According to a message from Jerusalem, during their recent stay in that city Mrs. Straus visited the Ghetto, and later told her husband of the misery and squalor she had witnessed. She suggested that something be done for the relief of the miserable: whereupon Mr. Straus immediately responded: "Establish a soup kitchen at once."

He then sent a letter to the Jewish authorities guaranteeing $10,000 annually for three years to support the kitchen. Since then between 500 and 600 persons have been fed daily through his charity.

ITALIAN CRUISER SUNK

Wreckage Indicates Loss of the Varese in Latest Battle.
Constantinople, April 27.—Wreckage washed ashore at the entrance to the Dardanelles led to the belief that the Italian cruiser Varese, one of the ships engaged in the bombardment of the forts last week, had gone down after the battle.

It was reported the Varese was badly damaged in the bombardment and that she probably sank.

"Lifer" Proves He Is Honest.
Marquette, Mich., April 27.—There is one honest man among the "lifers" serving time in Marquette prison. A least Mrs. A. J. Straus, of Cincinnati, believes so. Nell Sinclair, of Chippewa county, is the prisoner. After Mrs. Straus visited the prison she missed two diamond rings, which she valued at $1000. Sinclair found the jewels in the prison yard and they were at once returned to the owner.

COAL PRICES WAIT AGREEMENT

Anthracite Operators Refuse to Indicate Action.

DEALERS EXPECT RAISE

They Believe Prices of Domestic Sizes Will Be Higher and the Householder Forced to Shoulder the Burden.

Philadelphia, April 27.—The public will not know for at least a week whether the prices of hard coal will be advanced because of the prospective settlement of the dispute between the operators and the miners.

The tentative peace terms published indicate that the miners are to receive an advance in wages, and have caused much speculation as to the future price of the domestic sizes of coal.

Among the wholesale hard coal dealers throughout Philadelphia the opinion is unanimous, although at present lacking any official notification, that stove and pea coal will be advanced at least 25 cents per ton to meet the extra cost of production entailed by the increase of 10 per cent to the coal miners.

The operators remain silent as to their intentions. Under the present circumstances they could not say how much the wholesale price might be raised, because the settlement projects are simply in tentative form, prepared by a sub-committee of operators and miners' representatives, to be presented for consideration by a general committee in New York next Thursday afternoon.

Coal dealers in Philadelphia said the operators have not declared that they will raise the wholesale prices and will give no idea of their intentions before the peace plans are sanctioned. Many believe, however, that the domestic public will be charged more for coal because of the wage increase contemplated. The representative of a large coal company in Philadelphia said:

"We cannot learn anything from the operators about the future wholesale price, but we believe it will be higher. Many of us are impressed that stove and pea coal will be advanced in price."

From what has been learned as to the prepared report of the sub-committee to the general conference committee of union officials and anthracite operators, of which George F. Baer is chairman, it is indicated that the proposed increase in wages will be 10 per cent flat. Analysis of the peace plan so far as it is known, however, makes it apparent that this would mean only about 5 per cent advance in wages above the prices paid before the suspension of mining on April 1.

It has been estimated that the increased cost in mining coal under the proposed advance in wages will be about 12 1/2 cents a ton. It would seem, therefore, to impose a higher price on the domestic consumer than the actual increased cost of mining. The operators have said, however, that they cannot increase the cost of the steam sizes of anthracite coal because of competition from the bituminous market. The domestic consumer, under the circumstances, using principally the egg, stove, nut and pea sizes of hard coal, might be forced to shoulder the entire increased cost of mining.

READY TO RATIFY REPORT

Opinion Prevails Miners Will Resume Work by May 6.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 27.—Mine leaders returned from the New York conference, and when informed that there was much disappointment in the rank and file over the failure of the sub-committee to secure a greater increase in wages, declared that it was the best that could possibly be done under the existing circumstances.

The leaders all declare that the miners when they properly understand the text of the agreement will ratify it, and they assert that the mines will soon be placed in operation. The convention, at which the men will receive the report of the general committee, will be held immediately after the general conference in New York on May 2. The date for this convention will be set in a short time, and every indication points to Wilkes-Barre as the convention city.

The district leaders say that the convention will not delay in ratifying the agreement. It is understood that the appointment of colliery committees will be one of the great means the organization has ever had for building up its strength numerically, which also means financially.

The opinion prevails that the miners will again be in operation by May 6, and that for the next four years there will be peace in the coal regions and that the men are due to enjoy prosperity for a long period.

LAST RITES FOR GENERAL GRANT

President Taft Among Mourners at Services.

New York, April 27.—Military men and men prominent in public and private life assembled here to pay the last solemn honors to Major General Frederick Dent Grant, who died here on April 11.

The funeral had been deferred to await the arrival of General Grant's daughter, the Princess Cantacuzene, from her home in Russia.

The services were held in the chapel of Cornelius, the Centurion, on Governor's Island. The little chapel was too small to allow the admittance of the general public, but an opportunity was given to all New York to pay its tribute as the long military procession made its way to the tap of muffled drums over a five-mile line of march from the Battery to the West Shore ferry, at Forty-second street. At the latter point the government orders provided for a special train to take the body to West Point for interment.

President Taft, Vice President Sherman and General Leonard Wood were the most distinguished persons who came to New York for the funeral.

The general's immediate family was all in attendance, including Mrs. Grant, her son, Captain U. S. Grant; his daughter, the Princess Cantacuzene; the general's sister, Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, and also Mrs. Grant's brother and sister, Judge Honore, of Chicago, and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

The pallbearers included Senator Root, Andrew Carnegie, Henry W. Taft, General Tasker H. Bliss, General Horace Porter, General William Crozier, General T. H. Barry, General H. G. Sharpe, Hamilton Fish, H. H. Kohlsaat, Dr. Robert Abbe and others. Honorary pallbearers representing the military order of the Medal of Honor were General Daniel E. Sickles and General Horatio C. King.

Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago, and E. B. Smith, chaplain of Governor's Island, had charge of the services.

Cannon's Body Home From Nicaragua

Harrisburg, Pa., April 27.—The body of Leroy Cannon, one of the two Americans shot in Nicaragua in 1909 by orders of President Zelaya, was received at the residence of his parents in New Cumberland, near this city. The body of Cannon, who was executed without trial, was recovered through Secretary Knox.

Lantern Shows Suicide.

Coatesville, Pa., April 27.—A lighted lantern, sitting on the bank of a pond near Downingtown, which George E. Amuller, of that place, had used to light him to the spot where he committed suicide by drowning, led a party of searchers to his body. Amuller had been suffering from insomnia.

Village Destroyed by Fire.

Ithaca, N. Y., April 27.—The village of Locke, in Cayuga county, was partially destroyed by fire. It is estimated that the loss will reach about $300,000. A dozen houses, a church, hotel and a warehouse were destroyed and twenty families rendered homeless.

SCRAPS & HUMOR

An Ear for Melody.
"Here's yer boy, lady," the policeman said, leading the urchin in by the ear.
"O Bobby!" exclaimed the overjoyed mother, clasping him fondly to her heart. "Where have you been all day?"
"Ridin' up an' down in Becker & Ryan's elevator," answered Bobby.
"What have you been doing that for?"
"Cause they's a steam cally-ope that plays when the elevator starts up, an' I like t' hear the music."

Missed Real Grown Man.
Mary, aged 14, was found one day by an elder sister, sobbing and crying.
"What is the matter?" asked sister with great concern.
"Two boys asked me to go to the dance tonight," was the unexpected reply.
"Well, my dear child, certainly that is not such a terrible misfortune."
"Yes, but I told the first one I would go with him, and the last one was a long-panter!"

A Barometer.
"Biggins' friendship seems to flatter you."
"It doesn't flatter me," said the cynical statesman, "but it encourages me. He is one of those people who never trouble themselves to be affable except to those who are regarded as liable to have some pull."
Dubious.
"He's a perfect duck of a doctor!"
"For heaven's sake don't tell people so."
"Why not?"
"Naturally, they'll think he's a quack."

Beyond Masculine Aid.
"How's your wife?"
"She's having constant trouble with her head."
"Can the doctor help her?"
"No—nobody but the milliner."—Stray Stories.

Similarity.
"Binks certainly does tell the most wonderful tales about his automobile trips."
"But, then, you know, some yarn naturally goes with a spin."

Below Stairs.
"What's your missus kicking about?" inquired the housemaid from next door.
"This is her night out, but I told her I had an engagement meself."

Quite So.
"The mumps seem such a plebeian sort of sickness."
"It should not be, for actually it is rather a swell affair."

The Result.
"People ought not to borrow trouble."
"No, because that is a loan which fate always pays back with interest."

NOTICE
IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF ADAMS COUNTY.

To the heirs or legal representatives of Jesse Kohler, late of Mt. Pleasant Township, Adams County, Pennsylvania, deceased, and to all other persons interested:

Notice is hereby given that on the 6th day of April 1912, the petition of Anna M. E. Biddle was presented to the said Court, setting forth that she is the owner in fee of a certain Tract of Land situated in Mt. Pleasant Township, Adams County, Pennsylvania, known as the "Kohler Mill Property" along Little Conewago Creek, adjoining lands of William Kohler, William Weigert, Dr. J. P. Smith, J. Smith, Eli Link and others, containing 40 acres more or less, improved with a two-story brick dwelling house, bank barn, and three-story grist mill, and other improvements.

That the above mentioned real estate is the same Tract of Land which Jesse Kohler and wife by deed dated April first 1899, and recorded in the Office of the Recorder of Deeds of Adams County, in Deed Book "AA" folio 279, sold and conveyed unto one John P. Klunk, a predecessor in title of said petitioner; which said Deed contained the following reservation:

"Subject to the payment of four promissory notes of even date herewith, one of One Thousand ($1000.00) Dollars payable on the first of April 1879; one of One Thousand ($1000.00) Dollars payable on the first of April 1879; one of One Thousand ($1000.00) Dollars payable on the first of April 1879; and one of Five Hundred ($500.00) Dollars payable on the first of April 1879, all under the hand and seal of said John P. Klunk, and his heirs and assigns, which said sum of money is for part of the purchase money for the hereby sold premises."

That no assignment, release or satisfaction of said charge or encumbrance above recited appears of record in the County of Adams, and no payment of principal or interest has been made within the period of twenty-six years last passed on account of said charge or encumbrance, either by the present owner or by her predecessors in title; and praying the said Court that a Rule be issued to all the heirs and legal representatives of the said Jesse Kohler, deceased, and to all other persons interested, to show cause, if any, why a decree should not be granted and satisfaction of the said charge or encumbrance should not be entered upon the record thereof, as within prayed. Rule returnable May 20th 1912.

G. R. THOMPSON,
Sheriff of Adams County.
WILLIAM HERSH, Esq.,
Attorney for petitioner.

ROOSEVELT GIVES
TAFT THE LIE

Declares He is Guilty of Gross Hypocrisy.

HURLS BACK CHARGES

The Colonel Says the President is Guilty of the "Crookedest Kind of a Crooked Deal."

Worcester, Mass., April 27.—Theodore Roosevelt, replying to President Taft's broadside against him, declared the president guilty of "the grossest and most astounding hypocrisy" in declaring that he had never been disloyal to Roosevelt, gave the lie to the president several times, asserting at one time that the president was "guilty of a crooked deal," at another, that the president's conduct in opening up the harvest trust correspondence "obviously to influence the Massachusetts primaries," represents the very crookedest kind of a crooked deal, and declared that the act of administration in not applying the circuit court in the tobacco case to the supreme court "was incompatible with the theory that the administration was acting in good faith."

Asserting that "Mr. Taft is president only because I kept my promise in spite of infinite pressure to break it," and relating that President Taft wrote after he became president, "I can never forget that the power I now exercise was voluntarily transferred from you to me," the colonel shouted to his hearers: "It is a bad trait to bite the hand that feeds you." He had been defending his interpretation of his promise not to accept a "third term," having referred to a "consecutive" term, insisting that if he had raised his little finger in 1908 he could have had the nomination, but was steadily refused it, for Mr. Taft.

Colonel Roosevelt declared that the president in the Ballinger-Pinchot affair, especially in connection with "that part of it in connection with which important documents were misdated," was guilty of conduct, "which, if he had been the head of a bank would have gotten him into serious trouble with the bank examiner, and possibly even with the district attorney."

Summing up his attitude of opposition to the president, the colonel snapped out these sentences: "I do not believe he has given the people a square deal. I believe he has yielded to bosses and to the great privileged interests. I think he has done this through feebleness, not through viciousness. I am sincerely sorry for him and I only regret that he did not have the strength of character to make good his promises to the American people."

"If he had really represented the interests of the plain people of the United States, I should have supported him heart and soul. I am against him only because I have been forced to believe that he does not and cannot represent the vital needs of the average man and the average woman."

"Mr. Taft says that I have not given him a square deal. He states that I garbled his speech at Toledo. He says that at Toledo he said that 'ours is a government of all the people by a representative part of the people,' and that I inserted after 'is' and should be 'I made this insertion (avowedly as an insertion) to show that Mr. Taft was approving of the doctrine, and his whole speech is senseless on any other assumption. He says now in his explanation that he only meant that the action of the adult males controlled the action of the women and children of the community. This is simply not the fact. Mr. Taft's whole speech and all his similar speeches were designed to prove that our government succeeded because we did not have direct action by the people, but had action only by a representative part of the people."

Using quotations from the president, the colonel insisted that President Taft "has been defending the theory that the bosses are better able to tell what the people need than are the people themselves."

Mr. Roosevelt said: "Either his words mean absolutely and precisely this or they mean absolutely and precisely nothing; and for him to try to escape the consequences of his statements by saying that he alluded on to women and children is trifling with the intelligence of the people. To speak of such action on his part as a 'square deal' is itself the crookedest kind of a deal. He is trying to dodge the consequence of his statement by deliberate misrepresentation of that statement."

Cheering crowds met the colonel Worcester turned out along the streets. There were 5000 people outside Mechanics' hall and 3500 inside cheered his reply to the president. There were 10,000 people in Salem square, where the colonel talked out doors.

HAS BEEN FOUND

That of Isidor Straus Also on Hearse Ship.

New York, April 27.—The bodies of Colonel John Jacob Astor and Isidor Straus, the millionaire merchant, of this city, who lost their lives in the Titanic disaster, have been recovered.

They are on board the cable ship Mackay-Bennett, now on its way to Halifax, N. S., with 205 bodies recovered on the scene of the wreck.

News of the recovery of the bodies was contained in a dispatch to the White Star Line company.

The cable ship Minia in a wireless to the Halifax agents of the White Star line stated that the body of C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railroad, had been found.

The wireless dispatch from the cable ship Mackay-Bennett gives the additional identifications of forty-nine of the heretofore unknown recovered dead on that cable ship. Among others is that of W. C. Dulles, of Philadelphia. Of the 205 dead on board the Mackay-Bennett the names of ninety-one have been sent ashore by wireless.

OLYMPIC ABANDONS TRIP

Seamen Quit When Non-Union Firemen Board Liner.

Southampton, Eng., April 27.—Trouble piled high for the White Star company in connection with the sailing of the steamship Olympic for New York.

The voyage of the ship has been finally called off. Another strike was added to the firemen's strike when a half hundred deck hands left the ship, declaring that they would not work with non-union men. These men had taken the places of the firemen who left the steamship two days ago owing to the alleged defective collapsible lifeboats.

The deck hands in a body left the ship and went aboard a tugboat. They were making for Southampton, when they were intercepted by the police, who had been notified by the company of the men's action. The deck hands, who were arrested for leaving the Olympic, were remanded to jail on the charge of mutiny.

McFarland Defeats Wells.

New York, April 27.—With 10,000 fight fans cheering wildly, Packy McFarland, of Chicago, who has a right to be called the world's champion boxer at 135 pounds, conquered Mar Wells, the British lightweight title holder, in a rather one-sided ten round bout in Madison Square Garden.

McFarland's wonderful skill in attack and defense completely bewildered the Briton, who seemed unable to land with effect. Wells received a grueling beating and took it like a man.

Body Snatchers at Dowle's Grave.

Chicago, April 27.—The discovery was made that a trench several feet deep had been dug about the grave of John Alexander Dowle, at Zion City, and the officials declared that some one had attempted to steal the body. Guards have been placed about the grave.

Appendicitis at Cornell.

LINER REFUSED TO AID TITANIC

Engineman of Californian Accuses Captain.

SAW ROCKETS FROM DECK

Swears Captain Refused to Respond to Signals of Distress From Sinking Ship.

Washington, April 27.—Ablaze with light from her saloons and cabins, the Titanic dashed full speed ahead to her destruction, according to Ernest Gill, a donkey engineman on the steamship Californian, who testified before the senate committee investigating the disaster.

Gill said that Captain Stanley Lord, of the Californian, refused later to go to the aid of the Titanic, the rockets from which could be plainly seen on the Californian.

This Captain Lord denied, but both he and his wireless operator acknowledged to having seen the rockets. Their ship, they said, was fast in the ice.

Gill's affidavit was listened to with the deepest interest by the committee. Gill was present and was placed on the witness stand immediately after Senator Smith, the chairman, had finished reading the affidavit.

"I saw the ship, which I took to be the Titanic," said Gill after being sworn, "some time before midnight. She was about ten miles away and went past us apparently at full speed. She was a big ship and I saw two tiers of lights. The Californian at the time was caught in field ice, its engines were stopped and she was drifting with the flow."

The vessel, Gill testified, must have been plainly visible to the bridge and the outlooks, as well as the rockets which were sent up later from the vessel. The Californian's captain, he said, paid no attention to the distress signals, and his refusal to get steam and go to the aid of the stranger so incensed the crew that Gill tried to organize a protesting party among the men. He failed, he said, because of the timidity of the men.

"What time did the Californian get up steam?" inquired Senator Fletcher. "I don't know, exactly," said the witness, "but it was some time after 5 o'clock."

From the rockets Gill judged the distressed ship to be not more than twenty miles off. He described the rockets, his description tallying with that given by Fourth Officer Boxhall of the Titanic, who sent them aloft.

When he tried to organize a committee of the crew to go to the captain and protest against his course, he said the men "were afraid they'd lose their jobs."

Captain Lord entered a sweeping denial of Gill's accusations and read from the Californian's log to support his contentions. Cyril Evans, the Californian's wireless operator, however, told of hearing much talk among the crew, who were critical of the captain's course. Gill, he said, told him he expected to get $500 for his story when the ship reached Boston.

Evans told of having warned the Titanic, only a brief time before the great vessel crashed into the berg, that the sea was crowded with ice. The Titanic's operators, he said, at the time were working with the wireless station at Cape Race, and they told him to "shut up" and keep out. Within a half hour the pride of the sea was crumpled and sinking.

Out of a mass of testimony taken from members of the crew of the Titanic by individual members of the senate committee came several conflicting statements as to the judgement of officers and sailors on the gravity of the vessel's condition after colliding with the iceberg Sunday night, April 14.

The declaration that he was warned fifteen minutes after the crash that he did not have half an hour to live, and to keep the information quiet and that this warning came indirectly from Mr. Andrews, manager of the firm of Harland & Wolff, of Belfast, Ireland, builders of the Titanic, who went down with the ship, was made by Samuel Hemming, a seaman. Hemming declared that he had been awakened from his sleep by the slight shock of the collision and had gone back to bed but was soon alarmed by one of the ship's joiners who rushed in and ordered him and others to turn out.

Then the boatswain came and said "You fellows have not half an hour to live." Hemming said he was told this information came from Mr. Andrews. Other witnesses from among the crew declared they did not get such a warning, and that many of them were "skylarking and joking" after the accident.

Several sailors told of seeing J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine, after the accident, and of his escape from the ship. One of them said that Ismay aided women and children into the boats.

George Rowe, quartermaster, in charge of the lifeboat in which Mr. Ismay left the Titanic, said that Mr. Ismay did not get into the boat until women and children had failed to respond to a call. Ismay, he said, was not ordered into the boat, but stepped in just before it was lowered. Ismay, he said, issued no orders in the life boat, leaving him (Rowe) in absolute charge.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Blake, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal, Captain Murrell's friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnapped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overhauls Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Judge Slocum, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

CHAPTER V.—Betty Malroy, a friend of the Ferrises, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her, and is rescued by Bruce Carrington, who threatens to whip the captain.

CHAPTER VI.—Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the same stage. Yancy and Hannibal disappear, with Murrell on their trail. He overtakes them in the mountains of Tennessee. Murrell gets Yancy drunk and stabs him in a fight that followed. Hannibal escapes in a canoe.

CHAPTER VII.—Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old friend, Murrell arrives at Judge's home. Hannibal hears of the finding of Yancy's body. Price arrested as counterfeiter.

CHAPTER IX.—Cavendish family on CH. Yancy, who is apparently dead. Price breaks jail.

CHAPTER X.—Betty and Carrington arrive at Belle Plain.

CHAPTER XI.—Hannibal's wife discloses some startling things to the Judge. Hannibal and Betty meet again.

CHAPTER XII.—Murrell arrives in Belle Plain. Is playing for big stakes.

CHAPTER XIII.—Judge Price makes startling discoveries in looking up land titles. "Charley Norton, a young planter, who assists the judge, is mysteriously assaulted.

CHAPTER XIV.—Norton informs Carrington that Betty has promised to marry him. Carrington bids Betty good-bye. Norton is mysteriously shot.

CHAPTER XV.—More light on Murrell's plots. He plans uprising of negroes.

CHAPTER XVI.—The Judge and Hannibal visit Betty.

CHAPTER XVII.

Betty Leaves Belle Plain.

Hannibal had devoted himself loyally to the judge's glorification, and Betty heard all about the letter, the snuffing of the candles and the reward of five thousand dollars. It vastly increased the child's sense of importance and satisfaction when he discovered she had known nothing of these matters until he told her of them.

"Why, where would Judge Price get so much money, Hannibal?" she asked, greatly astonished.

"He won't have to get it, Miss Betty; Mr. Mahaffy says he don't reckon no one will ever tell who wrote the letter—he 'lows the man who done that will keep pretty mum—he just deserv't tell," the boy explained.

"No, I suppose not—," and Betty saw that perhaps, after all, the judge had not assumed any very great financial responsibility.

"He can't be a coward, though, Hannibal," she added, for she understood that the risk of personal violence which he ran was genuine. She had formed her own unsympathetic estimate of him that day at Boggs' race-track; Mahaffy in his blackest hour could have added nothing to it. Twice since then she had met him in Raleigh, which had only served to fix that first impression.

"Miss Betty, he's just like my Uncle Bob was—he ain't afraid of nothing! He totes them pistols of his—loaded—if you notice good you can see where they bulge out his coat!" Hannibal's eyes, very round and big, looked up into hers.

"Is he as poor as he seems, Hannibal?" inquired Betty.

"He never has no money, Miss Betty, but I don't reckon he's what a body would call poor."

It might have baffled a far more mature intelligence than Hannibal's to comprehend those peculiar processes by which the judge sustained himself and his intimate fellowship with adversity—that it was his magnificence of mind which made merely a passing phase—but the boy had managed to point a delicate distinction, and Betty grasped something of the hope and faith which never quite died out in Slocum Price's indomitable breast.

"But you always have enough to eat, dear?" she questioned anxiously. Hannibal promptly reassured her on this point. "You wouldn't let me think anything that was not true, Hannibal—you are quite sure you have never been hungry?"

"Never, Miss Betty; honest!" Betty gave a sigh of relief. She had been reproaching herself for her neglect of the child; she had meant to do so much for him and had done nothing! Now it was too late for her personally to interest herself in his behalf, yet before she left for the east she would provide for him. If she had felt it was possible to trust the judge she would have made him her agent, but even in his best aspect he seemed a dubious dependence. Tom, for quite different reasons, was equalled out of the question. She thought of Mr. Mahaffy.

"What kind of a man is Mr. Mahaffy, Hannibal?"

"He's an awful nice man, Miss Betty, only he never lets on; a body's got to find it out for his own self—he ain't like the judge."

"Does he—drink, too, Hannibal?" questioned Betty.

"Oh, yes; when he can get the lick, he does." It was evident that Hannibal was cheerfully tolerant of this weakness on the part of the austere Mahaffy. By this time Betty was ready to weep over the child, with his knowledge of shabby vice, and his fresh young faith in those old tattered demagogues.

"But, no matter what they do, they are very, very kind to you?" she continued tremulously.

"Yes, ma'am—why, Miss Betty, they're lovely men!"

"And do you ever hear the things spoken of you learned about at Mrs. Ferris' Sunday-school?"

"When the judge is drunk he talks a heap about 'em. It's beautiful to hear him then; you'd love it, Miss Betty," and Hannibal smiled up sweetly into her face.

"Does he have you go to Sunday-school in Raleigh?"

"I ain't got no clothes that's fitten to wear, nor no pennies to give, but the judge, he 'lows that as soon as he can make a raise I got to go, and he's learning me my letters—but we ain't a book. Miss Betty, I reckon it'd stump you some to guess how he's fixed it for me to learn?"

"He's drawn the letters for you, is that the way?" In spite of herself, Betty was experiencing a certain reluctance of feeling where the judge and Mahaffy were concerned. They were doubtless bad enough, but they could have been worse.

"No, ma'am; he done soaked the label off one of Mr. Pegloe's whisky bottles and pasted it on the wall just as high as my chin, so's I can see it good, and he's learning me that a-way! Maybe you've seen the kind of bottle I mean—Pegloe's Mississippi Pilot; Pure Corn Whisky?" But Hannibal's bright little face fell. He was quick to see that the educational system devised by the judge did not impress Betty at all favorably. She drew him into her arms.

"You shall have my books—the books I learned to read out of when I was a little girl, Hannibal!"

"I like learning from the label pretty well," said Hannibal loyally.

"But you'll like the books better, dear, when you see them. I know just where they are, for I happened on them on a shelf in the library only the other day."

After they had found and examined the books and Hannibal had grudgingly admitted that they might possess certain points of advantage over the label, he and Betty went out for a walk. It was now late afternoon and the sun was sinking behind the wall of the forest that rose along the Arkansas coast. Their steps had led them to the terrace—where they stood looking off into the west. It was here that Betty had said good-bye to Bruce Carrington—it might have been months ago, and it was only days. She thought of Charley—Charley, with his youth and hope and high courage—unwittingly enough she had led him on to his death! A sob rose in her throat.

Hannibal looked up into her face. The memory of his own loss was never very long absent from his mind, and Miss Betty had been the victim of a similarly sinister tragedy. He recalled those first awful days of loneliness through which he had lived, when there was no Uncle Bob—soft-voiced, smiling and infinitely companionable.

"Why, Hannibal, you are crying—what about, dear?" asked Betty suddenly.

"No, ma'am; I ain't crying," said Hannibal stoutly, but his wet lashes gave the lie to his words.

"Are you homesick—do you wish to go back to the judge and Mr. Mahaffy?"

"No, ma'am—it ain't that—I was just thinking—"

"Thinking about what, dear?"

"About my Uncle Bob." The small face was very wistful.

"Oh—and you still miss him so much, Hannibal?"

"I bet I do—I reckon anybody who knew Uncle Bob would never get over missing him; they just couldn't, Miss Betty. The judge is mighty kind, and so is Mr. Mahaffy—they're awful kind, Miss Betty, and it seems like they get kinder all the time—but with Uncle Bob, when he liked you, he just laid himself out to let you know it!"

"That does make a great difference, doesn't it?" agreed Betty sadly, and two piteous tearful eyes were bent upon him.

"Don't you reckon if Uncle Bob is alive, like the judge says, and he's ever going to find me, he had ought to be here by now?" continued Hannibal anxiously.

"But it hasn't been such a great while, Hannibal; it's only that so much has happened to you. If he was very badly hurt it may have been weeks before he could travel; and then when he could, perhaps he went back to that tavern to try to learn what had become of you. But we may be quite certain he will never abandon his search until he has made every possible effort to find you, dear! That means he will sooner or later come to west Tennessee, for there will always be the hope that you have found your way here."

"Sometimes I get mighty tired waiting, Miss Betty," confessed the boy. "Seems like I just couldn't wait no longer—"

"He sighed gently, and then his face cleared. "You reckon he'll come most any time, don't you, Miss Betty?"

"Yes, Hannibal; any day or hour!"

"Whoop!" muttered Hannibal softly under his breath. Presently he asked: "Where does that branch take you to?" He nodded toward the bayou at the foot of the terraced bluff.

"It empties into the river," answered Betty.

Hannibal saw a small skiff beached among the cottonwoods that grew along the water's edge and his eyes lighted up instantly. He had a juvenile passion for boats.

"Why, you got a boat, ain't you, Miss Betty?" This was a charming and an important discovery.

"Would you like to go down to it?" inquired Betty.

"Deed I would! Does she leak any, Miss Betty?"

"I don't know about that. Do boats usually leak, Hannibal?"

"Why, you ain't ever been out rowing her, Miss Betty, have you?—and there ain't no better fun than rowing a boat!" They had started down the path.

"I used to think that, too, Hannibal; how do you suppose it is that when people grow up they forget all about the really nice things they might do?"

"What use is she if you don't go rowing in her?" persisted Hannibal.

"Oh, but it is used. Mr. Tom uses it in crossing to the other side where they are clearing land for cotton. It saves him a long walk or ride about the head of the bayou."

"Like I should take you out in her, Miss Betty?" demanded Hannibal with palpitating anxiety.

They had entered the scattering timber when Betty paused suddenly with a startled exclamation, and Hannibal felt her fingers close convulsively about his. The sound she had heard might have been only the rustle of the wind among the branches overhead in that shadowy silence, but Betty's nerves, the placid nerves of youth and perfect health, were shattered.

"Didn't you hear something, Hannibal?" she whispered fearfully.

For answer Hannibal pointed mysteriously, and glancing in the direction he indicated, Betty saw a woman advancing along the path toward them. The look of alarm slowly died out of his eyes.

"I think it's the overseer's niece," she told Hannibal, and they kept on toward the boat.

The girl came rapidly up the path, which closely followed the irregular line of the shore in its windings. Once she was seen to stop and glance back over her shoulder, her attitude intent and listening, then she hurried forward again. Just at the boat the three met.

"Good evening!" said Betty pleasantly.

The girl made no reply to this; she merely regarded Betty with a fixed stare. At length she broke the silence abruptly.

"I got something I want to say to you—you know who I am, I reckon?" She was a girl of about Betty's own age, with a certain dark, sullen beauty and that physical attraction which

"You Needn't Be Afraid, I Got Something Important to Say."

Tom, in spite of his vexed mood, had taken note of earlier in the day.

"You are Bess Hicks," said Betty. "Make the boy go back toward the house a spell—I got something I want to say to you." Betty hesitated. She was offended by the girl's manner, which was as rude as her speech. "I ain't going to hurt you—you needn't be afraid of me. I got something important to say—send him off, I tell you; there ain't no time to lose!" The girl stamped her foot impatiently.

Betty made a sign to Hannibal and he passed slowly back along the path. He went unwillingly, and he kept his head turned that he might see what was done, even if he were not to hear what was said.

"That will do, Hannibal—wait here—don't go any farther!" Betty called after him when he had reached a point sufficiently distant to be out of hearing of a conversation carried on in an ordinary tone. "Now, what is it? Speak quickly if you have anything to tell me!"

"I got a heap to say," answered the girl with a scowl. Her manner was still fierce and repellent, and she gave Betty a certain jealous regard out of her black eyes which the latter was at a loss to explain. "Where's Mr. Tom?" she demanded.

"Tom? Why, about the place, I suppose—in his office, perhaps." So it had to do with Tom. Betty felt sudden disgust with the situation.

"No, he ain't about the place, either! He done struck out for Memphis two hours after sun-up, and what's more, he ain't coming back here to-night!" There was a moment of silence. The girl looked about apprehensively. She continued, fixing her black eyes on Betty: "You're here alone at Belle Plain—you know what happened when Mr. Tom started for Memphis last time—I reckon you ain't forgot that!"

Betty felt a pallor steal over her face. She rested a hand that shook on the trunk of a tree to steady herself. The girl laughed shortly.

"Don't be so scared; I reckon Belle Plain's as good as his if anything happened to you?"

By a great effort Betty gained a measure of control over herself. She took a step nearer and looked the girl steadily in the face.

"Perhaps you will stop this sort of talk, and tell me what is going to happen to me—if you know?" she said quietly.

"Why do you reckon Mr. Norton was shot? I can tell you why—it was all along of you—that was why!" The girl's furtive glance, which searched and watched the gathering shadows, came back as it always did to Betty's pale face. "You ain't no safer than he was, I tell you!" and she sucked in her breath sharply between her full red lips.

"What do you mean?" faltered Betty.

"Do you reckon you're safe here in the big house alone? Why do you reckon Mr. Tom cleared out for Memphis? It was because he couldn't be around and have anything happen to you—that was why!" and the girl sank her voice to a whisper. "You quit Belle Plain now—tonight—just as soon as you can!"

"This is absurd—you are trying to frighten me!"

"Did they stop with trying to frighten Charley Norton?" demanded Bess, with harsh insistence.

Whatever the promptings that inspired this warning, they plainly had nothing to do with either liking or sympathy. Her dominating emotion seemed to be a sullen sort of resentment which lit up her glance with a dull fire; yet her feelings were so clearly and so keenly personal that Betty understood the motive that had brought her there. The explanation, she found, left her wondering just where and how her own fate was linked with that of this poor white.

"You have been waiting some time to see me?" she asked.

"Ever since along about noon."

"You were afraid to come to the house?"

"I didn't want to be seen there."

"And yet you knew I was alone."

"Alone—but how do you know who's watching the place?"

"Do you think there was reason to be afraid of that?" asked Betty.

Again the girl stamped her foot with angry impatience.

"You're just wastin' time—just foolin' it away—and you ain't got none to spare!"

"You must tell me what I have to fear—I must know more or I shall stay just where I am!"

"Well, then, stay!" The girl turned away, and then as quickly turned back and faced Betty once more. "I reckon he'd kill me if he knew—I reckon I've earned that already—"

"Of whom are you speaking?"

"He'll have you away from here to-night!"

"He? . . . who . . . and what if I refuse to go?"

"Did they ask Charley Norton whether he wanted to live or die?" came the sinister question.

A shiver passed through Betty. She was seeing it all again—Charley as he groped among the graves with the hand of death heavy upon him. A moment later she was alone. The girl had disappeared. There were only the shifting shadows, as the wind tossed the branches of the trees, and the bands of golden light that slanted along the empty path. The fear of the unknown leaped up afresh in Betty's soul; in an instant flying feet had borne her to the boy's side.

"Come—come quick, Hannibal!" she gasped out, and seized his hand.

"What is it, Miss Betty? What's the matter?" asked Hannibal as they fled panting up the terraces.

"I don't know—only we must get away from here just as soon as we can!" Then, seeing the look of alarm on the child's face, she added more quietly, "Don't be frightened, dear, only we must go away from Belle Plain at once." But where they were to go, she had not considered.

Reaching the house, they stole to Betty's room. Her well-filled purse was the important thing; that, together with some necessary clothing, went into a small hand-bag.

"You must carry this, Hannibal; if any one sees us leave the house they'll think it something you are taking away," she explained. Hannibal nodded understandingly.

"Don't you trust your niggers, Miss Betty?" he whispered as they went from the room.

"I only trust you, dear!"

"What makes you go? Was it something that woman told you? Are they coming after us, Miss Betty? Is it Captain Murrell?"

"Captain Murrell?" There was less of mystery now, but more of terror, and her hand stole up to her heart, and, white and slim, rested against the black fabric of her dress.

"Don't you be scared, Miss Betty!" said Hannibal.

They went silently from the house and again crossed the lawn to the terrace. Under the leafy arch which canopied them there was already the deep purple of twilight.

"Do you reckon it were Captain Murrell shot Mr. Norton, Miss Betty?" asked Hannibal in a shuddering whisper.

"Hush—Oh, hush, Hannibal! It is too awful to even speak of—," and sobbing and half hysterical, she covered her face with her hands.

"But where are we going, Miss Betty?" asked the boy.

"I don't know, dear!" She had an agonizing sense of the night's approach and of her own utter helplessness.

"I'll tell you what, Miss Betty, let's go to the judge and Mr. Mahaffy!" said Hannibal.

"Judge Price?" She had not thought of him as a possible protector.

"Why, Miss Betty, ain't I told you he ain't afraid of nothing? We could walk to Raleigh easy if you don't want your niggers to hook up a team for you."

Betty suddenly remembered the carriage which had taken the judge into town; she was sure it had not yet returned.

"We will go to the judge, Hannibal! George, who drove him into Raleigh, has not come back; if he hurry we may meet him on the road."

Screened by the thick shadows, they passed up the path that edged the bayou; at the head of the inlet they entered a clearing, and crossing this they came to the corn-field which lay between the house and the high road. Following one of the shock rows they hurried to the mouth of the lane.

"Hannibal, I don't want to tell the judge why I am leaving Belle Plain —about the woman, I mean," said Betty.

"You reckon they'd kill her, don't you, Miss Betty, if they knew what she'd done?" speculated the boy. It occurred to him that an adequate explanation of their flight would require preparation, since the judge was at all times singularly alive to the slightest discrepancy of statement. They had issued from the corn-field and went along the road toward Raleigh. Suddenly Betty paused.

"Hark!" she whispered.

"It were nothing, Miss Betty," said Hannibal reassuringly, and they hurried forward again. In the utter stillness through which they moved Betty heard the beating of her own heart, and the soft and all but inaudible patter of the boy's bare feet on the warm dust of the road. Vague forms that resolved themselves into trees and bushes seemed to creep toward them out of the night's black uncertainty. Once more Betty paused.

"It were nothing, Miss Betty," said Hannibal as before, and he returned to his consideration of the judge. He sensed something of that intellectual nimbleness which his patron's physical make-up in nowise suggested, since his face was a mask that usually left one in doubt as to just how much of what he heard succeeded in making its impression on him; but the boy knew that Slocum Price's blind side was a shelterless exposure.

"You don't think the carriage could have passed us while we were crossing the corn-field?" said Betty.

"No, I reckon we couldn't a-missed hearing it," answered Hannibal. He had scarcely spoken when they caught the rattle of wheels and the beat of hoofs. These sounds swept nearer and nearer, and the darkness disgorged the Belle Plain team and carriage.

"George!" cried Betty, a world of relief in her tones.

"Whoa, you!" and George reined in his horses with a jerk. "Who's dar?" he asked, bending forward on the box as he sought to pierce the darkness with his glance.

"George—"

"Oh, it you, Missy?"

"Yes, I wish you to drive me into Raleigh," said Betty, and she and Hannibal entered the carriage.

"All right, Missy. You'll ready to me to go along out o' here?"

"Yes—drive fast, George!" urged Betty.

"It's right dark fo' fas' driving," Missy, with the road jes' a-min' fo' to bus' yo' springs with chuckholes!" He had turned his horses' heads in the direction of Raleigh while he was speaking. "It's scandalous black in these heah woods, Missy—I 'clar' I never seen it no blacker!"

The carriage swung forward for perhaps a hundred yards, then suddenly the horses came to a dead stop.

"Go along on, dar!" cried George, and struck them with his whip, but the horses only reared and plunged.

"Hold on, nigger!" said a rough voice out of the darkness.

"What yo' doin'?" the coachman gasped. "Don' yo' know dis de Belle Plain carriage? Take yo' han's off'n 'em hosses' bits!"

"Yes—drive fast, George!" urged Betty.

He Was Looking Into the Face of Slocum, the Tavern-keeper.

Two men stepped to the side of the carriage.

"Show your light, Bunker," said the same rough voice that had spoken before. Instantly a hooded lantern was uncovered, and Hannibal uttered a cry of terror. He was looking into the face of Slocum, the tavern-keeper.
